

Domain	Country	Registrations	The most frequently registered ccTLDs do not necessarily reflect the world's population distribution — at least not yet.
.de	Germany	11,130,000	China has the fastest-growing ccTLD and is on pace to overtake Germany by 2010. Overall, the 10 most popular ccTLDs account for nearly 79% of all ccTLD registrations.
.cn	China	6,035,000
.uk	United Kingdom	5,010,000	These sites that use all ccTLDs are equally easy (and cheap) to register, which is one reason more countries have had stronger growth than others.
.nl	Netherlands	2,545,000
.it	Italy	1,426,000
.us	United States	1,300,000
.br	Brazil	1,200,000
.ru	Russia	1,139,000
.ch	Switzerland	1,000,000
.au	Australia	953,182
.jp	Japan	905,000

Country Codes of the World

At the end of every URL and email address is a top-level domain (TLD).

Although rare in the world's most popular TLDs, it is far from alone. There are more than 240 TLDs in use around the world, most of which are country code top-level domains (ccTLDs).

ccTLDs are two-letter codes assigned to countries and territories.

Of the 193 and four TLDs that have been registered, more than 21 million are ccTLDs.

Some ccTLDs are easy to decipher, such as .us for America.

But many codes are not so obvious, such as .il for Israel or .ca for South Africa.

That's where this map fits in.

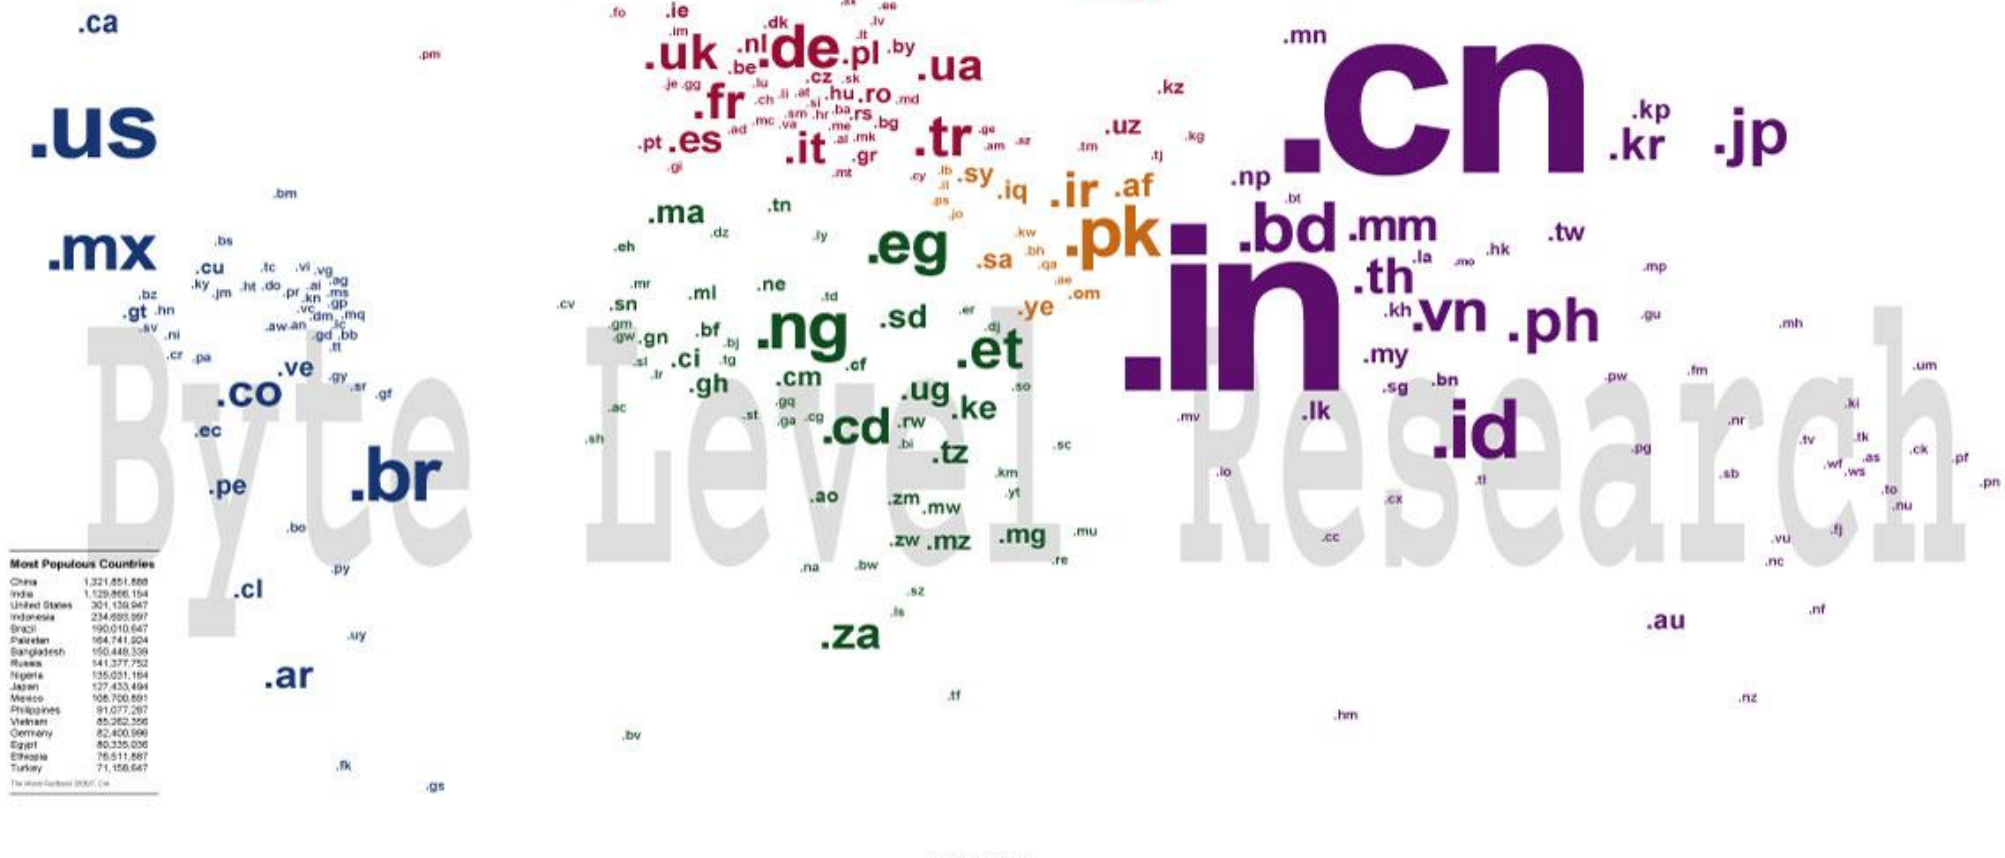

This map includes 147 ccTLDs, each aligned over the country or territory it represents.

Each ccTLD is color-coded to the population of the country or territory, with the exception of China and India, which were released by ICANN to accommodate the layout of the other end of the spectrum. The smallest type size used reflects these sources.

with 10 million or fewer residents.

Each geographic region is color-coded with the legend below for easy reference.
